Research Interests

My research interests center around users' adaptation and use of novel communication technology. My primary research focuses on human interaction with embodied conversational agents and chat bots, and the influence of those chat bots on users' feelings and behavior toward those systems. I also study users' adaptation to intelligent systems designed to detect deception. I am interested to learn how people adapt their behavior, either consciously or unconsciously, as they interact with novel systems. I focus on a design science methodology following the Last Research Mile philosophy. Much of my research involves laboratory experiments.

Areas of Specialization

Privacy • Human-Computer Interaction • Deception • Conversational Agents

Education

2015	Ph.D. in Management Information Systems, University of Arizona
2010	MS in Information Systems Management, Brigham Young University
2010	BS in Information Systems, Brigham Young University

Grants, Honors & Awards

2011-2014	$205,000 in research grants, Center for Identification Technology Research
2011	Science Foundation Arizona Graduate Research Fellow

Teaching

COURSES TAUGHT

2013-2014 MIS 307 – Introduction to Business Data Communications (Effectiveness: 4.6/5.0)
2012 MIS 111 – Introduction to Management Information Systems (Effectiveness: 4.9/5.0)

Service to the Profession

Peer review work for:

- International Conference on Information Systems
- Hawaii International Conference on System Sciences
- Americas Conference on Information Systems
- AIS Special Interest Group on Human-Computer Interaction (SIGHCI)
- IEEE, SMC-A
- Mensa Research Journal

Technical and Other Skills

- Programming languages: Python, R, Java. A little Ruby, PHP, and C++.
- Web application development with Python and Django
- TCP/IP networking (formerly CCNA certified)
- SQL & database management
- Drupal content management system
- Linux and Windows servers
- Spanish: Moderate proficiency
